Spring Break Mission Week: Official Mission, Purpose, and Task

Our Mission

To share the light of God across the campus, the community, the nation and the world through the work of our hands, the love of our hearts, and the knowledge of our minds.

Our Purpose

To redeem the week of Spring Break through committed acts of servant leadership, restorative justice, and transformative reflection.

Our Task

To use our common and mostly unskilled abilities to help clean up, help remodel, help rebuild, help teach, and help heal our world. While our task is important, it is only a vehicle to our mission and purpose.
Prophetic Voices:
A Vision for Mission Programs at OWU
An Excerpt from the Mission Workshop and Mantling Service
by Kelly Adamson, Associate Chaplain of Mission and Vocation

...Mission programs at OWU go beyond a week of doing the something you can do. If you stopped there, you would be noble givers of charity. Yes, you would be rightly (and perhaps righteously) meeting an immediate need.

But, what is hoped for you is far riskier than giving up spring break or summer vacation time. This is the risk we have not yet discussed today. We send you out to do for others, to learn about and from others, to encounter others, and hopefully in the process, to encounter the Other – capital O. And we hope, when you come back home to OWU and back to your own local communities, we hope you find yourself saying again with Helen Keller, “I am only one, but still I am one, I cannot do everything, but still I can do something. I will not refuse to do the something I can do.”

We hope you tell your story of encounter. We hope you allow yourself to be changed, and find yourself unsatisfied. That’s right. We hope you come back unsatisfied – unsatisfied with a world that allows great poverty, unsatisfied with a world that allows children to go hungry, families to live unsheltered, and that allows inequality and injustice to lead to terrorism and war.

Yes, a week of charity and service is noble. But we want more for you, for the world. We dare to dream that you will return with a passion for justice, for educating and dialoguing for real and lasting change. This is the risk you cannot calculate. Do you dare to risk being so open to another culture that you may encounter God there? Do you dare to risk being forever changed and transformed? Upon return will you dare to risk the life of a prophet?

And so, we listen to the story of encounter. We wait to hear the prophet’s voice...
The Benedictine Experience:
Women in Community

Original Vision
Team members will experience the Benedictine model of faith, community, prayer and social action as they help with a variety of the sisters' service projects (including a soup kitchen and an inner-city youth art house), learn about the social justice initiatives of the sisters, participate in community and prayer life of the monastery, and converse with sisters on special topics.

Final Reflection
Covington, KY recently found 7 OWU women within their community. The group stayed at and worked in conjunction with St. Walburg’s monastery to learn about Benedictine life and spirituality as well as doing community service with the sisters. For the week, the team followed the life and teachings of St. Benedict, framing learning and service with the Liturgy of the Hours four times a day. This integrated approach allowed the team to fully understand and appreciate the Benedictine way through relaxation, reflection and renewal.

Border Servant Corps
Texas/Mexico

Original Vision
This experience offers students the opportunity to examine the dynamics that exist on the border between Mexico and the United States. Students will explore these dynamics from both sides of the border.

Final Reflection
Border issues were explored with regards to a variety of perspective concerning immigration, poverty, domestic violence, economic and social consequences of an expanding Mexican economy, political influences, and the abuse of power in American foreign policy and in the Mexican government as well. We met with people from all walks of life, including Border Servant Corps volunteers, a border patrol agent, Catholic priests and nuns, and volunteers in the social services sector of life on the border. The experience was filled with confusing and contradictory perspective as well as some wonderful self-developed insights by the team as a group and as individuals. All the little pieces we explored helped us see the larger picture, become aware of the problems, and how the people we met are working at the grassroots level to help deal with the consequences of such intricate dilemmas.

Habitat for Humanity: Collegiate Challenge

Original Vision
The Collegiate Challenge program has become a national tradition. Students from all over spend spring break 'concretely' serving through relationship and construction.

Final Reflection
The Habitat for Humanity Team served in Goldsboro, North Carolina by working construction on a house for a woman and her two children. We built, raised and plumbed walls, attached roof beams, put up the catwalks that will serve as roof supports, and affixed OSB board to the exterior of the walls...all to hurricane code. However, while we did a lot of physical labor, such labor was not all we experienced. Habitat is not a charity organization. Their motto is “not a hand out, but a hand up.” We were there to work with the community and we certainly did. We labored side by side with local people. We learned about race and diversity issues, both in Goldsboro and among ourselves. We experienced the local culture of Goldsboro through the church where we stayed, the people we worked with, the food we ate, and the places we went to relax. We received many gifts from our hosts and from each other: gifts of laughter, gifts of hospitality, gifts of love and caring, and above all gifts of community. We left OWU weary from pressures and deadlines; we returned rejuvenated and more in touch with the joys of life. We went as 11 individuals; we came back as a family. Truly, our spring break was well spent.

Building and Rebuilding:
Lakota Nation, SD

Original Vision

This intentionally interfaith team will engage the mission to rebuild Lakota-Anglo relationships through conversation, reflection, and service. We will help build a house, serve meals in the senior center, assist with children, and meet with the spiritual elders at night.

Final Reflection

Our time at the Rosebud Reservation was intense and wonderful and painful and healing. We saw and experienced firsthand the poverty, unemployment, and isolation the Lakota people endure on a daily basis. But we found out that this is not all that defines them; we also saw and experienced the hope and generosity that the Lakota people have for each other and outsiders. We came to know what they mean when they say "Metaku oyasin"—all my relatives: that they (and we) are connected with each other and with the earth, that everything in creation is connected to us.

Two Communities of Faith:

Rome, Italy

Original Vision
This team will work with Mother Theresa's order of religious sisters in their men's homeless shelter, soup kitchen, and food and clothing bank, situated in the heart of ancient Rome, Italy. They will also explore the Catholic faith by visiting the holy sites of Rome, going to Mass at St. Peter's, and receiving a blessing from the Pope.

Final Reflection
The Rome Team experienced a deeply personal pilgrimage on this year's trip. The team was able to attend a Papal Audience, and prayed at the tombs of many Saints and Apostles. Our work with the sisters exposed us to new depths of humility and service. We shared and reflected at every meal together and grew as a community of faith.

The Rome Team is anxious to continue growing and sharing their faith at Ohio Wesleyan, through continued service and faith exploration.

Sustainable Harvest International: Honduras

Original Vision

This team will explore sustainable agriculture practices and how they contribute to the economic and environmental well-being of local communities as they work with local families seeking to implement these practices.

Final Reflection

We worked through an organization called Sustainable Harvest International. In Honduras we worked with FOCOSO or Fundacion (a dash over the o) Cosecha Sostenible Honduras which is a newly independent and recognized non-profit organization in Honduras who had its beginnings with SHI. We worked in the district of Santa Barbara in the countryside of San Pedro Sula. There we worked on a FOCOSO demonstration farmsite, and visited different communities to learn about and see some of the projects that community members are doing through FOCOSO. The trip allowed us to see how sustainable practices are so beneficial to both the environment and the families that implement them (health of families, trade with in the community.) There is so much hope, and families are so proud of their accomplishments; they have gain power over their lives and can provide a good life for their families. Finally and most of all, I met wonderful Honduran people, and witnessed the wonderful aspects of the Honduran (rural) culture. They are generous, selfless, and community/family oriented. This contrasts with an aspect of American life. American individualism can lead often lead to isolation and disconnection, but through this experience we have seen that there is a better way.

Katrina Relief Project

Original Vision

This team will seek an opportunity to assist with Hurricane Katrina Recovery efforts somewhere in the Gulf area.

Final Reflection

The disaster relief team was an eye-opening experience for all members of the team. Most of our time was spent gutting houses that had mold growing from floor to ceiling. Although the experience was full of ups and downs, highs and lows, the city and its resilience made a lasting impression on each one of us. As we came close to New Orleans and saw the destruction, one student best summed up our initial impression of the area by saying, “this is not America.” But, throughout the course of the week we met amazing people, who despite the fact that they had lost everything, were beaming from ear to ear and so thankful. They could not reiterate enough how truly blessed they were. Their pride for their city and their optimism consumed all of us. New Orleans truly is a City of Hope and our short time in this city was nothing short of life-altering and brilliant.

Wilderness Trek

Original Vision

This experience offers students the opportunity to make connections with self, others, God, and the Creation through living and traveling in the wilderness together.

Final Reflection

We were led to the wilderness of North Carolina and were humbled by the 60+ mile/hr winds, the freezing nalgenes and heinous hills. We saw what was in our hearts as we cared for each other, ourselves and the environment around us. In our wandering and weakness and we discovered the strength of a real community and the awe inspiring Glory of the Lord who sustained and dwelled in our camp with us.

Faculty/Staff Mission Team

Original Vision—Really!

This year, for the first time ever, we had a group of people comprised entirely of faculty and staff serve as a Spring Break Mission Team. This team incorporated professors, administrators, buildings and grounds, public safety, coaches, and housekeeping. Many of these people had applied to be faculty/staff advisors for the student trips, but with so much interest, we just couldn’t place them all on student teams. Not to be deterred, we worked together to form a separate team for them. Over spring break they went to the Houma Nation in Louisiana to assist with Hurricane Katrina Recovery, especially with displaced school children. As with our other teams, a phenomenal experience ensued. As one member of the team put it, “This isn’t the first Faculty/Staff Mission Team...This is the first ANNUAL Faculty/Staff Mission Team.”

Crossroads of the Powerful and Powerless
Washington, D.C.
Throughout this program, participants will explore power as it relates to poverty. They will spend time both with the poor and those working on the grassroots level to alleviate poverty as well as lobbyists and politicians who strive to reduce poverty.

“I want to share with you that my soul rejoices after listening to so many sincere and great stories from students. All of these programs are such a success, because it is not only the determination of the organizers, but as well of the participants with their generosity to get involved in so many issues that demand attention and commitment. I want to congratulate all of you for your dedication and hard work. These programs are, in part, what Ohio Wesleyan University is all about. Once again, well done.”

Next Year’s Mission Projects

Were you inspired by one of this year’s teams? Did you participate in a project that you think needs to happen again? Have you heard rumors of past years’ projects that you would like to see revived? Do you have a new idea?

Proposal forms for next year’s Mission Projects will soon available in the Mission and Vocation Office (Ham-Wil 4th floor)! All projects must go through this formal proposal process. Any student or staff member is welcome to submit a proposal. Proposals for previous and new mission projects are welcome. We look forward to working with you to make your vision a reality!

Proposal forms are due Friday June 5, 2006.

We are in special need of domestic proposals.

In addition to this year’s projects, some other ideas from years past for domestic programs include:

The Hopi Nation
Washington D.C. Homeless Immersion
Chicago Refugee Relocation Center
McCurdy Mission School, New Mexico
May my feet rest firmly on the ground
    May my head touch the sky
    May I see clearly
    May I have the capacity to listen
    May I be free to touch
    May my words be true
    May my heart and mind be open
    May my hands be empty to fill the need
    May my arms be open to others
    May my gifts be revealed to me
So I may return that which has been given
