

TRUTH, JUSTICE AND RECONCILIATION: --- Doomed to Separate Paths?

Charlie Clements

- Director, Harvard Center for Human Rights Policy
- A founding member of Physicians for Human Rights

Charlie Clements, Executive Director of the Carr Center for Human Rights Policy at the Harvard Kennedy School, will share lessons from his long career of human-rights advocacy. He will examine some of the human-rights tragedies of recent decades in Latin America – the military coup and dictatorship in Chile, the so-called ‘dirty war in Argentina, the genocide directed against Mayans in Guatemala, as well as the death squads in El Salvador who killed a Bishop, American nuns, and Jesuit leaders – and will explore the challenges of those who have pursued truth, justice, and the possibility of reconciliation.

A film about his work in El Salvador, Witness to War, won the 1985 Academy Award for Best Documentary Short.

Monday, November 18th

7:00 p.m.

Beeghly Library, Bayley Room

Lecture is free and open to the public. Sponsored by the Department of Philosophy, with support from the Departments of Politics and Government, Sociology and Anthropology, and PESJ—Poverty, Equity, Social Justice Course Connections.